These activities provide review exercises featuring the letters q to z. Ask your child to look at the letter in the box on the left. Say together the sound, and then name the pictures in that row. Your child should then circle the picture that doesn't begin with this letter sound. (Note that the letter q also includes u. Explain that q is never written by itself, it is always followed by u. One way to help your child to remember this is to say that q stands for queen and the u is a friend, who is always there to carry the crown.) Then say together the name of each picture. Ask your child to identify the first letter sound (or the last letter sound in the case of x) and then complete the word by writing down the missing letter.
