

Questions

Always write a question mark at the end of a sentence that asks a question.
A question mark takes the place of a period.

Write a question mark or a period at the end of each of these sentences.

What time is it

Will you help me

Can I play with you

Read quietly

I live on Old Road

Will you please be quiet

Where do you live

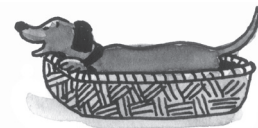

Who wants a chip

When will you be seven

Stand in a line, please

Some questions begin with these words: what where when who

The dog is in bed. Where is the dog?

Change the sentences below into questions.

Remember: Sentences that are questions end with a question mark.

A chick is a baby hen.

.....

Jon's birthday is in May.

.....

The cat is up the tree.

.....

Miss Jones is my teacher.

.....

Questions

Always write a question mark at the end of a sentence that asks a question.
A question mark takes the place of a period.

Write a question mark or a period at the end of each of these sentences.

What time is it?

Will you help me?

Can I play with you?

Read quietly.

I live on Old Road.

Will you please be quiet?

Where do you live?

Who wants a chip?

When will you be seven?

Stand in a line, please.

Some questions begin with these words: what where when who

The dog is in bed. Where is the dog?

Change the sentences below into questions.

Remember: Sentences that are questions end with a question mark.

A chick is a baby hen.

.....What is a chick?.....

Jon's birthday is in May.

.....When is Jon's birthday?.....

The cat is up the tree.

.....Where is the cat?.....

Miss Jones is my teacher.

.....Who is Miss Jones?.....

Your child needs to know how to construct sentences using a period for a statement and a question mark for a question. He or she should recognize question words and be able to turn statements into questions.