This activity is based on the vowel a and features words in the “an” word family. First say together the names of all the pictures. Next, your child has to find all the pictures that rhyme with the one in the center of the page. If a picture rhymes, draw a line to connect it up. Once again, your child can copy the rhyming words at the bottom of the page. If your child is ready, point out that the letter endings are the same. Talk about the sound that this pair of letters makes, and explain that new words are made when a different letter sound is added at the start of a word.
